

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED HERE OPPOSING COMMITTEE OF 21'S SCHOOL BILL

Courtroom Filled With Those Interested—Trueman Named Delegate to State Conference—Superintendents and Teachers Voice Ideas, as Do Trueman and Bogart.

At the meeting on the rural school bill held at the court house on Saturday afternoon, the court room was filled with representatives from the rural schools of Ulster county, trustees, superintendents, teachers, laymen and women. A city man butted in and seemed to start things off. There was ample discussion and finally resolutions were adopted opposing the proposed bill.

Shortly after the time set for the meeting to begin, William Trueman of Lake Katrine moved that Henry McCormick of Plutarch be elected chairman of the meeting, and the motion was unanimously carried. Mr. McCormick taking the chair. After thanking the meeting for the honor conferred upon him, Mr. McCormick said he supposed everyone knew that the meeting had been called by those opposed to the rural school bill, as it is likely to come up again for action in the legislature, and he called upon Mr. Trueman to further enlighten those present as to the situation.

Mr. Trueman said that the full responsibility for the present controversy going on throughout the state belonged to a very small group of professional educators who wished to improve the rural schools of New York state. They had on their side the heads of every farm organization, including the Grange. These groups from whom was chosen the committee of twenty-one, had a large sum of money from the commonwealth foundation with which they made a survey of the rural schools. On the report of these hired efficiency experts—not on their own investigation—the committee of twenty-one put the state into disrepute, especially three classes of very reputable citizens. The rural school trustees, the rural school teachers, the rural school district superintendents. All of these people were, however, from defending themselves. There were only a few to hit back for them and for the integrity of the schools.

Mr. Trueman said that though the report of the committee of twenty-one—a small volume—was a labored effort, there was much truthfulness in it and that no one could deny anyone could make out any report in any branch of human activity as bad. The duties of the committee of twenty-one did not end with their report as might have been expected, but from the report they framed a bill which they presented to the legislature. Mr. Trueman said that one of the best men in the country, and a man of long experience in legislative bills, said that bill surpassed anything he had ever seen to befool and confuse the level-headed, and that it would take a clever lawyer to understand it.

However, the bill was passed by the senate and then came up for a public hearing. Much as he hated to admit it, Mr. Trueman said there were only five rural residents present to oppose the bill, while there were three hundred professional educators, farm organizations, editors of farm papers, with the exception of the Rural New Yorker, even a representative of the department of labor in support of the bill. However, the bill before it was sufficient to kill it before it went to the assembly and it was never brought forth. Now there is no bill before the lawmakers but the rural school bill and it was to be expected that the main issues which killed the bill would be introduced into the new bill soon to be offered.

Then Mr. Trueman summed up the whole "report" in these few plain words: "It calls for compulsory consolidation of our rural schools and complete elimination of local control." The committee had pretty successfully camouflaged the question at issue, saying that consolidation was not intended, but within the last few days, Mr. Trueman said, he had learned, and that from the governor, that consolidation was just what the committee were after. He said those present had come together to decide whether or no they would scrap the rural school law that had been operative for the past 112 years and in its place vote for a conglomeration of commissions, boards, etc., as follows: State commission, county commission (There are 62 counties), district boards, community boards, community districts, intermediate units.

That would mean a host of paid officials and employees at a time when the best statisticians claim that one out of every sixty of the population of the United States is an official, and the industrial commission of the state of New York says that out of every twelve people gainfully employed one is on the public payroll.

"And then," said Mr. Trueman, "that committee of twenty-one had the consummate nerve to put upon the rural people a taxation the like of which they had never known before in order to support a cumbersome, revolutionary, confusing plan of operation. The question which we must now ask ourselves is whether or no we shall scrap the wonderful school law which for one hundred and twelve years has carried along our public school system at the best of a few Cornell University spe-

English Trains Are Few Today

60,000 Locomotive Engineers and Firemen Quit Asking Higher Pay—Industry Had Prepared for Strike.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
London, Jan. 21.—Railway service throughout England, Scotland and Wales was badly crippled, and in some places completely paralyzed today by the strike of locomotive engineers and firemen.

Strike leaders claimed that more than 60,000 men were out and that many members of the National Union of Railwaymen, were joining. The strike had been called by the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen to enforce a demand for more wages. Officials of the National Union of Railwaymen had forbidden members of that organization to join.

Most of the roads organized skeleton service, but it failed to meet expectations. Provincial centers reported complete stagnation in some places.

Industries had taken steps to meet the strike by storing up supplies of fuel and they have not yet begun to feel the effect.

Airplanes and motor lorries will be utilized for mail service and to carry foodstuffs. Government officials claimed there was no danger of a food shortage.

Up to early afternoon there had been no disturbances reported.

A Message to Trolley Riders

From Attorney Merritt, of Taxpayers' Association—Urges That City Representatives Be Spurred on to Make Real Fight Against Higher Fare.

Editor, The Freeman:

Kindly permit me through your publication to send to the people of Kingston and to all who travel upon our trolley cars a message as to the truly serious situation facing them resulting from the application of the Kingston Consolidated Railroad for permission to charge a ten cent cash and an eight cent ticket fare.

Unfortunately the common council in 1918 relinquished, by resolution, the power it had, under the franchise granted the trolley roads, of controlling rates of fare to be charged by them.

As a consequence of that resolution the traveling public, as well as the city government, is faced with a most serious crisis which will undoubtedly result after the hearing on February 5 before the public service commission in an order of that commission directing one of the following solutions:

First, it will direct an abandonment and tearing up of the tracks of practically all of what is known as the Colonial Road; or

Second, it will order a substantial increase in fare; or

Third, it will order both such increase and abandonment, unless—

1. The people of the city through its officials—the mayor, common council and corporation counsel—put up a REAL fight to protect the public and a REAL defense to the petition of the trolley company, and that defense must be made on February 5, 1924, at Albany, or they must forever hold their peace, as the commissioner in charge of the matter has held that the case must be closed at that time (only two weeks hence); or

2. Some plan for settlement of the matter must be presented at that time by agreement between the city and the company.

The Kingston Taxpayers' Association has consistently opposed the demands of the trolley company both in 1920, when the opposition presented by the association prevented the removal of the Colonial tracks, and at the present time. But unfortunately the attorney for such association can make no agreement or defense which will bind the city of Kingston in these proceedings. That must be done through the city officials and it is up to the people to see that they are properly defended and protected.

What my own opinion is, notwithstanding figures presented by the trolley company, may be summed up in a few words: I do not believe they are entitled to any increase in fare.

I should be glad within a few days to present through you a more complete statement of facts and figures and I trust that meanwhile the city will wake up and through its civic bodies and city officials make a real effort to combat the demands of the trolley company and I can assure them of the help and support of

Yours, etc.,
FRANCIS C. MERRITT,
Attorney for Kingston Taxpayers' Association.

Anderson Goes to Trial

Is Smiling and Confident—Whitman, His Counsel, Seeks to Exclude Catholics, Tammanyites and Anti-Klansmen.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
New York, Jan. 21.—Seven of the first ten talesmen who were examined today at the trial of William H. Anderson, superintendent of the New York State Anti-Saloon League on a charge of forgery, said they were opposed to prohibition.

When court recessed this afternoon ten tentative jurors were in the box. Seven said they were opposed to the Volstead law, two declared themselves neutral and the other was not asked about his views on prohibition.

Of the 25 talesmen examined 18 said they were "wets." The others were excused for various reasons before their views on prohibition had been brought out so that not a single "dry" was uncovered.

The court refused to disqualify talesmen as "wets," Catholics, anti-Klansmen, Tammany Hall supporters or "blue republicans" who Anderson alleged, constitute the forces in a plot to ruin him.

New York, Jan. 21.—Still seething at the charges against him and declaring himself a victim of a "wet, anti-Protestant plot," William H. Anderson, superintendent of the New York State Anti-Saloon League, went to trial today on the first of a series of indictments charging that he obtained $24,000 of the league funds by larceny, extortion and forgery.

Ferdinand Pecora, assistant district attorney, directed the prosecution and Anderson was represented by former Governor Charles S. Whitman. Anderson was smiling and expressed confidence as he sat in the court room of Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins, selected by the district attorney's office because he is a Republican and Protestant to offset Anderson's charges of a "Tammany anti-Protestant plot."

When examination of the 100 talesmen got under way, Whitman sought to find out if the talesmen were Catholics, Tammany Hall supporters, anti-Prohibitionists, anti-Klax Klan or supporters of Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., as Republican candidate for governor of New York. Anderson had accused Roosevelt of being a "wet Republican."

A great crowd thronged about the court room unable to find seats inside. It included both friends and enemies of the league head.

Miss McKee comes very highly recommended and the local committee feels it has been very fortunate in securing her. This rounds out a very elaborate entertainment program which will be put on immediately before the general dancing. The entertainment program will commence at 8:45 o'clock.

BOK FLATLY DECLINES TO TELL WHAT HE SPENT IN "PEACE PLAN" PROMOTION

As Senate Probe of Charge That His is a Scheme to Get U. S. Into League of Nations is Begun—"Not Public's Business."

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Washington, Jan. 21.—Edward W. Bok, promoter of the widely heralded $100,000 peace plan, flatly and repeatedly refused today to reveal to a senatorial committee the amount of money which he spent in promotion of the undertaking. It was his own business, he said, and not the public's nor the government's.

Bok's refusal to answer questions of this sort featured the opening of the senate's investigation of his plan, which its enemies charge is "propaganda" designed to lead the United States into the League of Nations.

The inquiry was opened with a statement from Senator Moses, Republican, New Hampshire, the chairman, that the committee would merely seek to learn "the sources of propaganda issued to influence American public opinion or to control legislation."

Bok created a mild sensation when he declared Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, wife of the Democratic vice-presidential nominee in 1920, and Mrs. Frank A. Vanderbilt, wife of the New York banker, whose husbands are both league of nations advocates, helped to select the "policy committee" which controlled the Bok award. He said he "kept hands off" after Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Vanderbilt became associated with the contest.

"When did the idea of a peace award originate with you?" Chairman Moses inquired.

"In 1922," Bok replied.

"Did it occur to you in the form it has since developed?"

"Exactly the same form. I consulted with a number of my friends and I took steps immediately to form an independent committee."

"What was the first step?"

"To appoint an executive officer. I named Miss Esther Lape."

"I distinctly told her I was not to be consulted about any details of the award," Bok added. "Some time later Miss Lape asked me to meet Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt and Mrs. Vanderbilt. I did and I left it to them to suggest members of the policy committee which was to direct the award. From that time on, I kept my hands off the award."

"How many jurors were there on the committee making the award?"

"Seven."

"What part did you play in selecting these jurors?"

"The names of several hundred persons were submitted to me for me to make any preferences I might have. I did so."

"Did you select any of these jurors?"

"Yes, I selected one myself, Mr. Edwin Root."

The witness then described a dinner party at a New York restaurant to which 100 persons were invited in Bok's name but with scores of the guests unknown to him. Questions by Senator Moses indicated the chairman felt this dinner party was intended to influence the award.

PIG THOUGHTS

"Ah, yes," said Porky Pig, "the beautiful springtime will be along before anyone knows it, grunt, grunt."

"Squel, squel," said Miss Ham, "you speak as though it were going to come a-walking on two legs or four."

"Grunt, grunt," said Porky Pig, "that is because you don't understand me as you should."

"Perhaps not as you'd like me to understand you," said Miss Ham.

"Well, the fact remains, say what you will, that the beautiful springtime will be along before anyone knows it, grunt, grunt."

"You said all that before," said Miss Ham.

"Things can be said more than once," said Porky Pig, "and no harm is done to anyone."

"It is not doing anyone the slightest harm because I said that the beautiful springtime would be along before anyone knew it, grunt, grunt, more than once."

"Yes, and now you're saying it again," said Miss Ham.

"But," she continued after a moment, "why are you so interested? Are you growing sentimental because it is springtime? Do you feel as though you were going to carry pigweed to some charming young Miss Pig and say to her:

"Dear Miss Pig, let me provide for you forever. Nothing would give me greater joy."

"Oh, no, no, no," granted Porky Pig. "I'd never say anything like that. I'm an old pig, set in my ways, and I'm not going to change."

"What is more, I could never say to any pig, young and beautiful though she might be, that nothing would give me greater joy than to provide for her forever."

"I couldn't say that for it wouldn't be the truth, and I do want to tell the truth."

"I'm a truthful pig, I am, grunt, grunt."

"Then why are you so interested in the fact that before long the spring will be here?" asked Miss Ham.

"Are you looking forward to seeing the buds burst into bloom, as they talk about?"

"Who talks about them bursting into bloom?" asked Porky. "The buds themselves don't, do they?"

"No, people," said Miss Ham. "People talk at way. I've heard them when the pen has been without food and there has been nothing else to do."

"And they've talked of the lovely springtime and of its beauty and of the flowers appearing and the blossoms and the green grass and all such things."

"They have seemed quite happy about it."

"I wasn't thinking of any of those things, grunt, grunt," said Porky. "I was thinking of other things. My thoughts were of mud, of beautiful, beautiful mud. Even though a pig is not by nature poetical I cannot help reciting my poem about it."

"Of course I wouldn't have composed it had it not been that the winter shed gets tiresome around this time and there wasn't much to do or to eat and I thought of happy times ahead."

"I suppose I cannot help but listen," Miss Ham said to herself, "unless I should be on-and-out rude and go off, and there isn't anywhere much to go in the winter shed. That's the way with poets."

"They always have one at a disadvantage. They corner one and now I must hear the poem."

Porky Pig commenced:

In the spring, the spring,
I sing, yes, I sing,
Or rather I squeal,
Of the joy that I feel,
For there's glorious mud,
Ah, glorious mud,
In which to dig,
I dance a jig,
At the thought of it:
The mud with me makes a great hit.

"I don't believe," said Miss Ham, "that it is very poetical to say 'makes a great hit,' but then of course I'm not up on the very latest kinds of poetry and there's no telling what poets may do—particularly pig poets!"

But Porky paid no attention. He was satisfied with his poem and satisfied that he had had someone to listen to it!

HATS SEEM DESTINED TO REMAIN SMALL

(By Eleanor Gunn.)

Coming events have a way of casting their shadows before them. The shadow cast by the spring hat is a small one. All prophets and seers appear to agree that it is to be another season of closely fitted hats, because the barber goes on shearing and bobbed hair is slicked down to the head so that only a small hat is in proportion.

It could not be permitted that women continue to wear the cloche as it was. It became monotonous to an unbearable degree and set milliners and hat blockers to work devising little turns and angles for the tiny brims, so that we would not all resemble so many peas in a pod.

The verdict then is a small hat, but not necessarily a cloche, a turban having as much chance for success as the mushroom, and perhaps more. Close fitting hats which turn sharply at one side are a relief from types which turn down demurely over the eyes. When of satin, Paris votes them chic, and what Paris approves is usually the accepted thing at the beginning of the season. One must regard this as the inception of a new millinery season, for once the Southern exodus begins, interest flags in winter fabrics and what is being prepared for resort wear holds the center of the stage, influencing women who are purchasing a between-season hat for home wear.

NEW SALEM.

New Salem, Jan. 21.—The versatility of the New Salem Social Club was again emphasized on Saturday evening, when they entertained some of the club's with a very ingeniously arranged "Poverty Party."

A neighborhood barn had been secured and dressed for the occasion with pine boughs, Japanese and barn lanterns and colorful streamers. Costumes indicating the nature of the party were strikingly original and Mrs. Elizabeth Van Tassel, an 81-year-old guest, won the first prize for having the most original and ancient costume. Ralph Freer won the second prize for the costume indicating the greatest poverty.

The club was compelled to limit the number of invitations as the barn proved inadequate to accommodate all the friends of the club. The club has in view a community party.

Chic Clothes for Misses' Wardrobes

Velvets, Crepes, Voiles, Soft Silks and Georgettes Are in Vogue.

In the tailored styles for young people are some exceedingly smart, picturesque suits, observes a fashion writer in the New York Times. One that is especially popular this season is a knit skirt of plaid wool, cut a length to show the knees; a tailored blouse of pounce, and a box coat of homespun in plain or mixture. This is called a three-piece suit and is made for a young lady of ten, or twelve years, though the utility and richness of the model have created a demand for it in smaller and larger sizes. With it, for the younger girls, are worn a soft felt hat with narrow brim, or an Angora tam, heavy wool stockings and flat-heel calfskin shoes. There must be no mistake about the stockings or socks and shoes, for a little lady recently admonished her mother against the impropriety of wearing silk stockings and dressy shoes with any sort of sports clothes. These three-piece suits are done in a number of combinations, usually with the plaid skirt, which may be so conveniently worn with any jacket or blouse and which is so comfortable for indoor every-day wear when the coat is laid aside. Varying the plaid and plain goods together, some smart little suits are made all of the homespun and tweeds, occasionally with a narrow tailored skirt. Charming costumes for more dressy occasions are made of velvet. With all these, pretty soft overhauses of crepe or pongee are worn, and many of fine white linen are worn, that always give a girl's toilet such an appearance of crisp freshness.

Velvet is quite the rage this season, more especially for children's garments. Black is most popular for suits, coat and skirt, to be worn with very pretty waist and for the one-piece frocks for juniors and misses with which the guimpes of sheer muslin are so becoming. These, of course, must be finished with needlework, trimmed with a bit of lace, Irish, valenciennes or filet, and some of the prettiest are smocked.

Velvet for Children.

A stunning suit for a girl of fifteen is made of black velvet, the jacket and skirt banded with white rabbit fur, the blouse of white crepe de chine, with motifs and a slight edging of baby Irish lace. To complete this little fairy princess toilet is a toque and a quaint round muff of rabbit. Squirrel is used in trimming another suit of soft green, and one of Havana brown is untrimmed. To be worn with it are a soft, ribbon-trimmed beaver hat and a scarf of brown fox.

The party dress is the piece de resistance in a girl's wardrobe, from her first birthday frock to the momentous costume for her introduction to the social world. Lovely poetic things are designed for the girl who is having her first holiday from boarding school—the happy days when there is a round of festivities in her honor and her own little crowd has a full program of frolics.

For these there must be a number of semi-dress toilets for the matinee and luncheon and the many excursions about town. The velvet three-piece suit plenty of fresh guimpes, two or three soft one-piece dresses of crepe

In color, a sports top coat and a dress coat, and then the "party" dresses, complete the equipment for a campaign that is likely to be as full of thrills as any in the years to follow.

The Useful One-Piece Frock.

One-piece frocks are designed for every occasion, the difference being a matter of material. In the midwinter models velvet is modish, it is so flattering to the complexion of youth, so serviceable equally for daytime and evening. A ravishing affair for a lady of twelve dresses her like a little cardinal in scarlet velvet, with nothing to contrast with the flaming shade. A deep plaited frill of scarlet chiffon falls from the shallow round neckline, and the frock is sleeveless.

Another model of aquamarine blue velvet is edged about the neck and quarter-length tight sleeves with squirrel, and is worn over a guimpe of fine white net, the full undersleeves of which are drawn in snugly at the waist.

With the exception of velvet, little heavy material is seen in the one-piece dresses. There is always, of course, the Peter Thompson type of outfit for athletics and outings, and the garment of serge or cheviot with bloomers in several styles, for service. But the crepes and voiles, soft silks and georgettes are almost universal in their vogue.

Simplicity is the keynote and in the best models elaboration of any kind is expressed in a touch of needlework, fine embroidery or smocking. Lace is sparingly and judiciously introduced in frocks for girls, except in those for the tots, on some of which much baby Irish and real valenciennes lace is used.

Frocks for girls at the junior age are the most difficult to select. When she is midway between girlhood and young ladyhood and growing by leaps and bounds she is a real problem in dressing. That she may appear correct and that she may be comfortable in her own consciousness as well as in her body and look her best as every girl at her age wishes to do, is matter for thought and taste and an infinite sense of the order and fitness of things. Happily, the present fashion is one of straight lines and little trimming, of soft materials made so that every girl, even she that is awkward, may look and feel at ease.

Crepe in Lovely Shades.

The crepes are adapted to these modes and are shown in lovely shades of the popular colors, browns and blues, greens, beige, rose, yellow and orchid. An engaging afternoon frock for a girl of fourteen or fifteen is worked out in pale green crepe de chine, the blouse long and fitted loosely. The bottom of the skirt, which is gathered quite full at the belt, is finished with a deep hem. The round neck and the cuffs of the elbow sleeves are stitched with a slender pattern of hand embroidery in shades of green floss. A sash of wide ribbon in Roman colors is wound about the waist and tied in a loose knot at one side. A tassel of mixed colors finishes each end of the sash.

There is a sentiment toward the revival of sheer muslin and tulle for dancing frocks such as were worn in the airy dances of years ago. But the dance of today is not the airy kind, and but a few exclusive models have found favor among the misses of individual taste. These are full-skirted, quaint frocks, with many ruffles of the material or frills of delicate lace.

Some fairylike skirts are of tulle with several flounces overlapping and very full. One, all white, has each narrow ruffle edged with a single line of silver; with a ruffle around the neck and tiny puffed sleeves. Little slippers of silver, and a sash of silver ribbon fastened with a petite nosegay of rosebuds and forget-me-nots create a picture to grace any day.

The most popular evening dress for girls between the ages of six and sixteen is of crepe or georgette, with the slightest suggestion of trimming. A sweetly pretty model shown by an exclusive shop is of white crepe, with long blouse and slightly draped skirt, boot-top length, the dress having a design in white ribbon of flowers and a trailing vine, extending from one shoulder to the knee.

Practical Things for Kiddies.

In the land of fashions in miniature there is everything dainty and pretty and lovable. Kiddies wear practical duds nowadays, rompers and pinafores and things for comfort. But many things are picturesque, too, and a trip through a little folks' bazaar is one of delight. Winter outfits display knitted slip-ons, in bright colors, silk or wool, and four-piece outfits, knickers, sweaters, cap and leggings that are knitted or woven of angora wool in beautiful color combinations. Tiny top coats are of the softest wool, and some are trimmed with fur, squirrel or rabbit; and the fur coats are cunning.

The tendency in the styles for the littlest ones is also toward simplicity. A touch here and there of peasant needlework in bright colors is one variation of the all-white that we associate with the dress of a child.

The French will always send little garments that have something their most faithful copyists seem not to put into their young people's clothes.

Water's Explosive Power.

By actual experiments it has been ascertained that the explosive power of a sphere of water only one inch in diameter is sufficient to burst a brass vessel having a resisting power of 27,000 pounds.

A Matter of Covering.

Little Elsie—They're saying that Aunt Lucy is a prude. What's a prude, mother? Mrs. Frank X. Posner—"A prude, dearie, is a woman who wears two-inch shoulder straps on her swimming suit."

A Heroic Man.

A West Virginia street car conductor had his wife arrested for refusing to pay her fare. If that doesn't make a bit with the company he may as well resign—he's gone about as far as he can.

Very Smart Cape Dress Made of "Pompom" Silk

Showing a winsome cape dress, in which "pompom" silk, an attractive fabric, is done in a most interesting manner.

Late Fashion Notes of Interest to All Women

"Hostess" gowns, which are really glorified negligees, are becoming even more glorious. They are made of handloomed brocades, lined with rainbow gauze.

Sardanian flit, hitherto used principally in fine luncheon sets, is seen upon afternoon frocks. This use for it is part of the wide vogue for laces of every kind.

Wooden jewelry is seen now and then with frocks embroidered in Czech or Russian designs. This wood is smooth as satin highly polished and carved into remarkable designs.

Choker necklaces of huge pearls are a renaissance of the choker neck ornaments so fashionable last season. The big choker pearls have come in as fads for the black velvet frock.

Egyptian allover embroidery is now seen on swanky little short-coated suits designed for winter resort wear. In some cases quaint little Egyptian faces peer out in the midst of lotus buds and ancient religious symbols.

Uncut emeralds in dull gold setting of an old-fashioned and heavy design were the jewels worn by one marvelously gowned woman at the opera. Her dress was of self-velvet in a shade that matched the misted green of her jewels.

There is a fad for rather small taffeta wrist bags to be carried to the opera. These perishable dainty things in faint rose, lavender and pearly white are just large enough to hold fan, opera glasses, handkerchief and powder box. They are long and narrow.

Hands and Nails May Be Kept in Condition

If a little sympathetic care and attention are given to the hands and nails at the end of a few months their condition will show a great improvement.

Cracked and split nails are often a sign of ill health. A nightly application of cold cream, however, often helps to overcome this condition.

The hands should be immersed in warm, soapy water for a few moments. Then with a soft piece of old linen or silk press back the cuticle of each nail, separately.

For 15 minutes soak tips of the fingers in soapy water. After taking care of the cuticle apply the polish, paste or powder. Powder should be moistened with cologne before applying. Next, take a piece of coarse linen cloth and before the polish has a chance to dry rub the nails well. Then finish by about a ten minutes' rubbing with a chamomile buffer. This will give a brilliant polish.

Lemon juice will give the nails the much desired transparency, besides being a good preventive for growing cuticle. Lemon juice also is a splendid whitener for the hands and keeps the skin smooth. It is as cleansing as soap and water. When household or other duties make the hands rough and dry lemon juice should be used instead of soap and water.

The Three-Piece Suit.

The question of how to appear to advantage upon all daytime occasions is answered by the three-piece suit. Extremely simple and smart in line when the coat is worn, it may take on a decidedly elaborate aspect when the coat is removed. Underneath is either a really beautiful one-piece frock or a costume blouse of strikingly handsome material. These blouses, by the way, have never been more exquisite. There is, for instance, a ravishingly lovely affair of pale silver cloth, sleeveless and with a rounded neckline.

Unlucky Friday Again.

In eastern Prussia, Sunday baptisms are believed to offset the unlucky auspices of children who are born on Friday.

Traveling by "Ant-Line."

In Australia there are ants which build their nests along a north and south line so accurately that a traveler may direct his course by their aid.

WOMEN IN BARBERSHOPS.

In former times men boasted of a number of reservations to which women were not admitted, but where are they now? The colleges and universities admit women as well as men. Women have invaded men's clubs as the wives, daughters and friends of members, and have even claimed the right to sit in "smokers" on trains whether addicts of the cigarette or not. There were only two inviolable reservations left when the saloon was abolished, leaving only the barbershop, and now that—the very last refuge of man—is more than threatened. The business women of New Orleans are demanding access to men's barbershops, and no doubt soon the demand will be general. And the ground that the "beauty parlors" are too expensive as well as too slow.

Women do not shave—at present—and relatively few of them have their hair cut or trimmed, their right to equal possession of ordinary barber shops for men will be questioned with at least some measure of determination. To the average man this will be no joke. Think of the restless dissatisfaction of hurried business men as they await their turn in a barbershop until several women ahead of them have gone through the long process of having their hair washed and dried, or marcelled, or permanently waved. If women required only the same quick service needed by men, the latter will argue, there might be more justice in the cry for co-barbershops, but, under the circumstances equity calls for separate shops for the sexes. It will be admitted that there is ground for the complaint against the high cost of "beauty parlors," but it will be logically urged that with the increase of women customers there will be more of these "parlors," with charges graded—as in the case of barbershops—according to locality and clientele.

BOOK PUBLISHING.

The annual meeting of the National Association of Book Publishers has brought to light the interesting fact that, though more books are now sold than ever, fewer separate or individual books are published. It seems that the yearly number of titles has been steadily diminishing. In 1913 the number of book titles published in America was 10,300; in 1923 the number was only 7,500. On the other hand, sales have greatly increased. In 1913 the sale of 8,000 copies of a biography was very unusual, while in 1923 there were books of this class that sold 50,000 or more copies. Yet it is stated that fewer biographies are now published than formerly and that fiction alone maintains a pretty uniform yearly average in the number of titles.

Obviously the vastly increased cost of production has made publishers more cautious and calculating in the matter of accepting manuscripts than they were in former years. They are less ready than they were to "take a chance" on a new writer or on an experienced writer whose previous works have not sold largely. This is unfortunate for both the classes of literary workers just mentioned, but it may tend toward a higher level of excellence in the publishers' output, although it is certain that there are "bests" that do not become "best sellers," as is shown by the long neglect and belated fame of no few writers of the very first rank. Under present conditions the disappointed young author who happens to have money is likely to be more than ever tempted to make a false start, through a mere printing house ready to "publish" anything whatsoever, provided the author will pay more than the heavy costs.

It is said that Henry Ford has an income of $450,000 a day and somebody has estimated that ten years from now he will be master of a fortune of three billion dollars. No wonder he thinks he can afford to declare publicly that "history is bunk" and to intimate that the Presidency is too unimportant a job to attract him.

Magnus Johnson was at least relatively merciful. He took only an hour and a quarter to tell those Philadelphia financiers what he thought of them and all their works. When La Follette had a similar opportunity some years ago he kept his wind-mill grinding three mortal hours.

More than 15,000,000 motor vehicles are operating in the United States—about one for every seven inhabitants. This a far cry from the early days when possession of an automobile implied wealth.

DO YOU HAVE A DAILY TEMPERATURE?

In a former article I spoke of the mistake that was made of carrying around a clinical thermometer, and then should it record a degree or two the frantic efforts to reduce the said temperature.

Temperature simply shows that something is wrong, and Nature is trying to right it. So, if at any time you have a slight temperature don't worry about it, but see that intestine is clear, abstain from eating, and get off your feet. You can send for the physician if it persists.

But what about it, if every day of your life you find yourself with a temperature of one or two degrees? Does this mean anything?

It most assuredly does, and should be investigated fully.

It means in plain language that something definite is wrong inside your body.

What is it likely to be? Well, to take something simple it may be due to sluggishness of the liver, allowing the intestinal contents to set up a slight poisonous condition.

It might also be due to bad tonsils.

These may not be very serious, nor give much inconvenience, but there is just enough absorption from them by the blood to give a one degree of temperature.

One of the results left by the liver is a chronic inflamed condition of the little caverns adjoining the liver.

They are in the forehead area, yes and in both cheeks. This is a frequent cause of that daily temperature.

Of course there are severe troubles like tuberculosis that likewise give daily temperature.

What is my point? That while you should not allow little temperature occasionally to worry you, the fact that you have a little temperature every day is a very significant thing. It means trouble.

Well, just begin looking for that trouble.

You are on your feet, you are not rest sick, your body is putting up a good fight for you. Get busy and help it.

Don't think because you are not in bed that you shouldn't bother with it. That might mean that you'll get down for good.

Go to the family doctor, and to your dentist, and let him try and find out the cause of the temperature.

They will likely find it all right, in any case remember there is always a cause, and it will be found, if you look for it long enough.

THE PENCIL AND OTHER SILHOUETTES

By ELEANOR GUNN.

Paradoxical as it sounds, the unusual in coats is usual this season. The odd coat, odd not only in the sense that it is extraordinary, but because it is a separate and distinct unit, is lifted into prominence. America differs from Paris in not pinning all her allegiance to one model. Abroad, the pencil silhouette, the coat wrapped snugly around the form is so far ahead of the other models that it may be cited as the only type of the year. Here we are more elastic in our ideas and appreciate a good-looking coat irrespective of its silhouette, as long as it is one of those approved.

The models sketched pay a tribute to Russian design and have a military tendency, to say the least. None of these models belong to the wrap-around variety, yet each is in its way worthy.

The use of novelty wools, simulating embroidery, some of which are Rodier's fabrics, is a detail to be remembered. The types of embroidery introduced in spring dress collections are many, and while they are a component part of the season's fashions, one could not call it an "embroidered" season. The mode is too tailored to permit of extensive decoration, and when color is introduced in this way, the motif is usually very compact and the tones daring.

In most coats, the outline is generally of the straight seven-eighths length type. Many are marked by the loosely fitted upper section. Exceptions occur, however, such as one version of the Russian coat type, wherein a very broad girdle emplacement is introduced in the front only, implying separate upper and lower sections, while the back is one-piece.

Coat groups are comprehensive in their scope, showing sport models in plaid and striped fleeced cloths, as well as general and formal wear wraps and capes. The sport groups often show an interesting array of striped kasha cloth models, the stripes effectively managed; in some cases worked in four sided panels with mitred corners.

Colorfulness is discernible throughout most collections, or else the alternative appears to be the black and white arrangement—the white usually ermine or white cone.

Capes are shown in both silk and cloth and these too, bear testimony to the mode of black and white. An effective model done in black crepe is finished with a deep border of white crepe with serried stripes of black chenille adds an unusual effect.

'Tis well, perhaps, that the law of averages includes dissimilarities whether it's a liking for pork chops or short cuts, beefsteak or liver and onions.

Yesterday wife telephoned husband: Wife—What do you want for dinner tonight, pork chops or short cut steak?
Husband—Either suits me.
Wife—But which do you prefer?
Husband—Either, but to choose I say pork chops.

Wife—But we just had pork chops the other night.
Husband—All right, make it short cut steak.

Wife—I believe spare ribs would taste good, don't you? Which would you rather have? Spare ribs?

Husband—Yes, that's all right. Wife calls a half hour later—Please hurry home tonight. I just put on the liver and onions.

Husband, after hanging up receiver—Well, I'll eat, at any rate.

Dr. Grinton on Prohibition

Results Cannot Be Judged In This Generation—Need Cooperation Between Federal and State Authorities—Can't Get It In New York State Under Smith New Roosevelt.

Sunday evening the Rev. G. W. Grinton, district superintendent, occupied the pulpit of the Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church and in a prelude to his sermon, spoke on the good citizen and the 18th amendment.

To sort these out, and obey those which please us, and disregard the rest, is anarchy. We deported Emma Goldman for that very performance.

Governor Placot the other night gave facts and figures to prove that the prohibition law is openly scouted. That dry enforcement is a failure. All this is reported by the Associated Press. But so far as I have seen no report was given of his closing words to the effect that the friends of dry enforcement were more determined than ever, to wage a relentless war against the foe of the Volstead Act. No less a personage than W. J. Bryan declared that there was no danger of the Volstead measure being repealed during this session of Congress.

I have said more than once, that the trouble with the good citizen was his once in a whileness. He wins a moral victory, and spends a whole year shouting about it, while the enemy is preparing all the time for the next battle.

There are law breakers every where in this Republic, an elaborate piece of machinery is set up to enforce the laws when they are not enforced. The good citizen has a right to ask its guardians of public safety, why?

It is a great mistake to elect to public office individuals who are not in sympathy with law enforcement.

An ex-bartender may know where to find the man who is selling liquor against the law but he has no desire to use his knowledge in bringing the law breaker to justice. We need cooperation between Federal and state authorities.

It is a difficult proposition at the present moment in this state, with a new Governor in Albany to enforce a dry law.

Governor Smith believes in a liberal interpretation of the Volstead act, and favors a wine and beer bill, which would eventually bring back the old time saloon, with all its attendant horrors, carrying in its wake wretchedness and woe to thousands of American homes. Young Theodore Roosevelt who has been mentioned as a possible candidate for Governor on the Republican ticket, takes the same position. Between the two I would just as soon have Smith.

While the former does not boast of his family tree, after all it is more numerous than Roosevelt's.

It is all our authorities, president, governors, mayors, right on down the line, lead a hand, it will not be healthy to break the law.

Butler is winning out in Philadelphia, which merely proves that the man who has the power, invested in his office, can drive out vice if he means business.

I am not betraying any trust when I mention that Bishop Anderson nearly two years ago read to his admirers a copy of a personal letter he sent to the late President Harding urging him for example's sake to come out squarely for prohibition. President Harding in the last speech that he made before going to Alaska said, "Lawless drinking is a menace to the republic itself."

It was my privilege last Wednesday to be one of the company that bore to President Coolidge a pledge of cooperation in bringing about a nation wide acceptance of the 18th amendment.

The president in reply said that it is a satisfaction to receive the assurance in this, your formal record of your purpose of cooperation in the difficulties that may be encountered in enforcing the laws of the land. With this assurance it is easier to go forward in the undertaking to provide that all the laws of our country may be observed.

In my opinion the poor man who enjoyed his glass of beer but who believes in sustaining the law and deliberately passes by the place where he knows he can get it, is a far better patriot, and exhibits more public spirit, than the rich man who has it hidden away in his cellar. The latter reminds me of the hog who has possessed himself of an ear of corn, and gone away into a corner to eat it by himself. I used to know a man who was a religious enthusiast; in moments of ecstasy he would shout out: "Obedience, duty, duty." It is the thing. As Senator Pepper puts it, Enforcement of law is good, obedience to law is better.

At the Anti-Saloon League convention last week a new word was adopted to apply to the individual who evaded the dry law because it interfered with his personal habits, and desire for self indulgence. Mr. King of Quincy, Mass., offered $200 to the man, woman or child, who could coin a word or term, which would carry unmistakable implications of wickedness and low life, and general futility and meanness. The jury awarded the prize to the man who invented scowfaw. The new term is not picturesque or catchy, whether it will live or no remains to be seen. The wets say the law is not enforced, because the people are not in favor of prohibition. Many of them are not. A child is not in favor of having the matches it is playing with ruthlessly removed, to play with matches is such great fun. The results however are often disastrous. I have faith in the American people, I do not believe they are altogether selfish, this is evidenced by the fact that before the Volstead act 33 states went dry, and nearly all by popular vote. Make no mistake; we will not know in this generation the real and lasting results of prohibition, because no great reform was ever worked out in a day. Lloyd George urged his countrymen to keep their hands off, and give America a chance to work out this problem herself, without any outside interference. Ten million women and children in this country, who are in moderate circumstances, believe in prohibition. It means a savings account, a modest home, and lots of striped candy for the kiddies. No, I am not afraid of a referendum on this question, because the whole support the 18th, and the latter would be sustained. The Irishman who rejoiced that the English had withdrawn their forces from Ireland said "now the Irish can fight in peace." This would be a pretty tame world if we did not have ideals to fight for. The prohibition victory is to be a victory of peace, and it is not to be put to rout by wet newspapers on the one hand, or fanatical dries on the other, neither is the desired victory to be won by tons of abuse but by education, which will result in the support of good legislation, and the proper enforcement of law and usher in a reign of happiness and prosperity to the American people.

Income Reached by Income Tax

Discovered: The conscientious bootlegger.

An upstate resident has asked the state income tax bureau how to report earning of $16,000 from "a confidential business," with expenses shown for rent, heat and automobile operation.

District Director J. G. Malone, of the Albany office of this bureau, explained that letters from baseball and stock pool winners, lucky holders of tickets in lotteries, professional gamblers, race track operators and others beyond the pale of industry, are frequently turning up in the mail.

He said that it was now generally understood that these amounts were taxable.

"Resident taxpayers," he added, "should include earnings from personal and professional services, business income, profits from sales of property, interest, rent and other sources, whether these services were performed or the transactions occurred in New York state, or in the words of Kipling, 'somewhere east of Suez.'"

Teachers, policemen, firemen and other employees of the cities, towns or villages are taxable under the New York law. Where they are members of a pension system they show as income their whole salary without subtraction of the retirement contribution. College professors who are paid from moneys, partly made up of federal appropriations, must show these entire amounts as taxable income.

SAYS HE SLEW WIFE IN ITALY 14 YEARS AGO

Man Charged With Carrying Concealed Weapons Makes Confession

White Plains, N. Y.—County Judge William F. Bleakley and court attaches were astounded the other day, when Natale Zucco, forty-two years old, of Mount Kisco, who had been arraigned on the charge of carrying a pistol, admitted that on August 18, 1909, he killed his wife, Carmela, in the town of Radicea, Province of Reggio, Calabria, and that he had never been arrested for the crime. Zucco, questioned by Judge Bleakley, appeared to be proud that he had killed his wife, because, he alleged, she had been unfaithful to him.

Zucco, who has been arrested forty times, on charges ranging from assault to murder, told Judge Bleakley that while he was living in Chicago he received information from a friend in Radicea that his wife had been unfaithful to him. He said he went to Italy immediately and confronted her. "How did you kill her?" Judge Bleakley asked. "I shot her five times," the prisoner answered. "Why did you do it?" "Because she no friend of mine," Eludes Italian Police. Zucco said he eluded the Italian police and fled across France. He engaged passage from Marseilles and returned to America, taking up his residence in Mount Kisco. Although arrested thirty-two times in this country he always has managed to escape sentence.

The story of the murder of his wife was brought out when Zucco pleaded guilty to the pistol-carrying charge. He was not sentenced, as efforts will be made by Deputy Sheriff Frank Cherico and Judge Bleakley to deport him.

According to a report submitted by the New York Police department to Judge Bleakley, Zucco in 1909 boarded the steamship Oceana at Hoboken and kidnapped from a berth Francesca Palladino who was being deported after conviction on several charges.

When the girl was arrested later she alleged Zucco was the chief of one of the most dangerous blackhand gangs operating in this country. One of Zucco's lieutenants, Rocco Cassano, she said, sailed on the same steamer with Lieutenant Petrosino and was the man who shot and killed the New York detective in Italy.

She charged Zucco shot her when she threatened to bare Zucco's black hand schemes to the police. Zucco boasted before Judge Bleakley that he had been arrested and imprisoned eight times in Italy for assault, conspiracy, resisting officers and numerous other charges. He denied, however, that he was implicated in a murder in Erie, Pa., for which he was arrested in 1913 and discharged on a technicality.

Pistol as Nut Cracker

Newcastle, Pa.—Looking about for something with which to crack the shell of a coconut William Kennedy, twenty years old, spied a revolver in a drawer in the kitchen. With the coconut firmly held between his knees he battered away with the butt of the revolver to get at the meat and milk within. After several minutes he struck the nut an exceptionally heavy blow and the revolver was discharged, the bullet entering his abdomen, killing him.

Bites Off Mother's Nose.

Munich, Germany—When his mother planned to marry him to a sixty-three-year-old woman, Franz Murn bit off his mother's nose. The sweetheart would have nothing to do with her lover then. That's just what Franz desired, he told police on his way to jail.

Blind Man Manages Farm.

Clear Creek, Kan.—Although he has been blind for 20 years, Charles Farwell, has succeeded in managing his farm with as much success as any other farmer in the township.

Woman Disarms, Then Spanks Boy Bandits

A woman motorist spanked two bandits who tried to rob her near Kansas City, Mo. The woman, Mrs. W. M. Mitchell, gave two boys a "lift" in her motor car, she said. One of them pointed a pistol at her and ordered her to give him her purse. She knocked the pistol from his hand, then spanked both of the boys, she declared. The young bandits fled.

TEXAN IS HELD IN TREE FOR 10 DAYS

Fell Into Deep Hollow and Found Self a Prisoner.

San Antonio, Tex.—Imprisoned for ten days in the hollow of a giant oak tree into which he had fallen, Harry Comstock, thirty-one, was rescued by Bexar county (Tex.) deputy sheriffs and farmers, who cut into the tree with an ax. He drank a gallon of water within a few minutes. He had been without food or drink during his imprisonment.

Comstock told those who rescued him that he climbed into the tree to seek shelter and that he fell into the deep hollow of the tree. He tried to get out, but failed. At intervals for ten days he shouted for help. Gradually he grew weaker.

Finally some one walking through the Otto Reiley ranch heard a cry for help. It was traced to the oak tree and help was summoned.

It took half an hour to hew into the trunk where the man was imprisoned. He was so weak that he could hardly speak, and his voice was husky for want of water. His body was bruised all over from struggles to escape.

Comstock was taken to a hospital at San Antonio. Food was given him gradually, medical aid was administered, and physicians say he will be none the worse for his strange experience.

Mother of Nine Constable in Village of Seldom Seen

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Mrs. Julia M. Effe, mother of nine children, a widow, rules Seldom Seen as its constable, by virtue of 19 votes of the 25 in the hamlet, in a recent election.

Seldom Seen, though scarcely more than a mile from this city's busiest section, is an inaccessible village of 16 homes, perched on the edge of a precipitous bluff that comprises a portion of St. Clair township.

Seldom Seen was the former rendezvous for promoters of cock fights and for a time boasted of several gambling resorts.

These are gone now, says Constable Effe, "thanks to fire, and I don't expect the element that supported them to return. But if they do—" (she displayed a threatening bare arm and a clenched fist, hardened by unrelenting daily manual toil)—"they better not try it!"

Gives Away His Motor Car After Plunge Into Lake

Patchogue.—So grateful was Charles Selbert of Miller's Place, L. I., that he escaped after he and Thomas Cullen of Manhattan had been hurled into the West Lake dam in an automobile last night after a collision with a truck that Selbert gave the automobile to Joshua Budd, garage man of Patchogue.

After spending the night in town Selbert took Budd to where the car lay in eight feet of water.

"I'm through with that pesky thing," he said. "Take it as payment for towing it out." (Budd did.)

Steps Between Bars Five Inches Apart, Falls, Dies

Cleveland, O.—Squeezing between iron bars five inches apart, Miss Doris Grossman, twenty-eight years old, a patient at the Cleveland State Hospital for the Insane, fell three stories to her death early today. Coroner A. P. Hammond pronounced death due to a broken neck. It was the second time with in six months that a patient has escaped from the institution by worming their way through the bars.

Fly Bite Causes Death

New York.—Henry Webendorfer, an American serving with the Indian-Bolivian mission in southern Peru, died on the steamer Essequibo November 17 of blood poisoning from a fly bite, and was buried at sea. It was learned on the ship's arrival from South America.

He formerly studied at the Bible Institute of Los Angeles, Cal. His widow and three children live in Beaver City, Neb.

Kind Motorist Is Robber Victim.

Piqua, O.—Joe Heckman is beginning to believe that kindness doesn't pay. He stopped along the road near here, to aid the driver of a large motor car, who hailed him. The man pointed a pistol at Heckman and stole $35 from him. The bandit then fled in his "crippled" machine.

Getting Skinnier Every Day

Something Must be Done, and Done Darn Quick, Too.

Tens of thousands of thin, run-down men—yes, and women, too—are getting discouraged—are giving up all hope of ever being able to take on flesh and look healthy and strong. All such people can stop worrying and start to smile right now for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets, which any druggist will tell you all about, is putting flesh on hosts of skinny folks every day.

One woman, tired, weak and discouraged, put on 15 pounds in five weeks and feels fine.

We all know that Cod Liver Oil is full of flesh producing vitamins, but many people can't take it because of its horrible smell and fishy taste, and because it often upsets the stomach.

McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets are as easy to take as candy, and if any thin person don't gain at least 5 pounds in 30 days your druggist will give you your money back—and only 60 cents a box. Ask any live pharmacist anywhere.

McEntee's Car Stolen Saturday

Port Ewen, Jan. 21.—Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Tucker, Sr., and daughters, Miss Esther Tucker, and Miss Heta Tucker, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Tucker, Jr., who have spent the week end at their home on Broadway, returned to New York city Sunday afternoon. The trip was made to and from in their new Hudson sedan.

The Rev. Charles G. Gorsc has had a telephone installed in the Methodist parsonage. The call is 2413-J.

A meeting of the men of the Methodist Church and congregation will be held in the chapel this evening at 7:30 o'clock to make arrangements for a supper to be given in Pythian Hall in the near future. It is earnestly desired that a great many men be present at this meeting. The men will have outfire charge of this supper.

The citizens of Port Ewen and vicinity will be called on by the young ladies in Mrs. William Schwegel's Sunday school class to ask for subscriptions to the Christian Herald for the purpose of sending the Rev. George W. Gulick of Ulster Park, county superintendent of Ulster County Sunday School Association, as a delegate to the Ninth World's Sunday School convention to be held at Glasgow, Scotland, June 18-26, 1924 free from all cost.

Arrangements are all completed for the big Damon Council fair and bazaar, which will open Tuesday evening and continue through the week until Friday. Tuesday evening's program will consist of several numbers among them Jesse King of Kingston, a star buck and wing dancer, Professor Fred L. Van Deusen, the well known magician of Kingston. covered later At Port Ewen—Police Arrest Three Young Men on Charge of Grand Larceny—Car Because Stalled Just Outside Village.

Saturday evening early Deputy county Treasurer Dwight McEntee parked his Durant touring car in front of the Wurts Street Baptist church, and later in the evening found the car missing. The theft was reported to the police department and to the sheriff's office.

Later in the evening Sergeant Stanley arrested Leo A. Dilkes, Lakeview N. J., William Haggerty, 848 Madison avenue, Brooklyn, and Frank Bailey, Park Hotel, 110th street and Park avenue, New York, in the Alpin Restaurant on lower Broadway, on a charge of grand larceny in stealing the car.

The three young men, according to the police, had helped themselves to the car and driven down the Wurts street hill and over the Round Creek Bridge and through the village of Port Ewen. About half a mile outside the village the car became stalled.

The two abandoned the machine and started to walk back to Kingston and on the way engaged the aid of Bert Walker, who brought them over to lower Broadway.

In the meantime Mr. and Mrs. Eliza Wells of Port Ewen saw the car leave the car and also take something off the rear of the car and put it into some wayside bushes. It later proved to be an insurance tag bearing Mr. McEntee's name.

The three men were later identified by Mr. Walker, Mrs. Wells and Ross Neher of Neher's Garage at Port Ewen.

They spent Saturday and Sunday in jail, and when arraigned before Judge Schuch in police court today, entered pleas of not guilty. The hearings were adjourned to January 21, and bail fixed at $2,000 each, payable to furnish bail all three were remanded to the county jail.

Automobile Etiquette.
Authorities on etiquette agree that when a man and woman are riding together in a carriage or automobile the woman should be seated on the right. If the vehicle is not so placed that the woman, in stepping in, can easily move over to the right side, good form permits her to take her seat and allow the man to step across to his seat. Some authorities regard it as extreme for a man to walk to the left side of the car to enter. In case there is no doorman in attendance the man can close the door as he steps into the car.

The Difference.
The rector of a fashionable London church was induced to preach at a well-known prison. When in the vestry he said to the prison chaplain: "Now I have come, I don't know what to say to your convicts." The chaplain replied: "Preach to them exactly as you do to your own congregation; and remember only one thing: my people have been found out and yours have not—yet."

New York, Jan. 21.—Irregularity marked trading at the opening of the stock exchange today.

The market was unsettled in the forenoon trading due partly to the British railroad strike and the accompanying break in sterling to the lowest level since 1922. The railroad list was somewhat heavy. Oil stocks were firm. Steels, although fractionally lower, held steady.

Coffey Engages Laureate Tonight

Says the Albany Times-Union: Boxing fans in this section are looking forward with much interest to the scheduled twelve-round bout between Frankie Laureate, Troy's sensational welterweight battler, and Vince Coffey, the Kingston boy. The match is one that the fans have been awaiting for some time and the demand for tickets at so early a date indicates that the Lyceum Theater in Troy will be packed to the doors when the rivals square off. The bout will top the show to be staged by the Collar City Athletic Club tonight.

There is added interest in the match because Coffey holds two decisions now over the pride of Troy. Laureate was mowing down all opposition two years when he ran amuck of the Kingston fighter. Coffey scored two knockdowns in the first bout and won the decision and just to show that there was no luck attached to his victory he repeated in another match. The defeats did not halt Laureate, however, for the Troy boy set out to start all over again and he made good. Since losing to Coffey the Collar City pugilist has defeated some of the best welterweights in the game, and he now feels that the time is ripe to wipe out the marks that Coffey has placed against him. Laureate and his friends are confident that it can be done, but Coffey and his many admirers still contend that Laureate is one fighter who cannot pick the Kingston star.

Morgenweck Out for Met. Honors

Will Strengthen Team in Attempt To Win Second Half—Attendance Here Falling Off—Western Trip Was a Hard One.

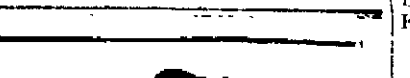

Frank Morgenweck's team had one of the hardest schedules ever attempted by a professional basketball club. Starting Wednesday, January 2, at Kingston by defeating Yonkers, going to Amsterdam January 10, and defeating Glens Falls, then January 11th to Utica, defeating that team. Following this up with an all night trip and part of the following day arriving at Warren, Ohio. They lost by two points, then on to Akron, where the Celtics defeated them, then on to Cleveland where Kingston won the most important of all western games. The following day found the team in Alliance losing by one point. In all of the western games A. A. U. rules are interpreted entirely different than in the east as played in Rochester, which made it impossible for the team to play anywhere near the usual game. As soon as the team had finished dressing in Alliance they were whisked to Cleveland, a 75 mile drive by automobile reaching Cleveland at 2 o'clock in the morning thence to Kingston arriving home at 6 p. m. just in time to defeat Greenpoint. The following night found the team playing in Trenton, where they were defeated in what perhaps was the most unfair game of the season by three points. This game has been written up by Referee Murray to President O'Brien and in his letter Mr. Murray stated that under present conditions a visiting team cannot win in Trenton. Manager Morgenweck also made complaint (but not a protest) asking that President O'Brien see some of the Trenton games and see that the visiting team be given a fair chance. In this game Barlow was disqualified, Referee Murray was hit on the head leaving the cage during the halves and Charlie Powers also being struck. Directly after the game, the team again started on a long back trip going to Rochester, reaching there at 7 p. m. and defeating the famous Centrals again by a score of 28-24. Last week the Celtics just nosed out this team in the last 5 seconds by one point. 7,000 fans witnessed this game. This made 11 games played out of which 4 were lost.

During this stretch the team has traveled over three thousand miles and has played to approximately 40,000 people. Had Manager Morgenweck cared to, he could have continued to book every night until February 2nd and possibly longer. At the present time, however, the fight to win the second half of the Metropolitan League is most important. All managers are now strengthening their teams. Manager Morgenweck now is working on a plan to secure Danny McNichol one of the coaches of the University of Pennsylvania and one of the best known college players and coach in the country. McNichol is a team mate of Soup Campbell's in Philadelphia. Also plans for more strength are being made. However, in spite of the fact that the trip drew such great crowds, the patronage in Kingston has fallen off to 865 attendance on January 9th and 567 attendance on January 16th. With such poor attendances Morgenweck says it is impossible to compete with Paterson who drew over 6,000 fans last week and Visitation who are averaging 3,000 and Trenton with approximately 2,000 per game. For the home team to bring such players as McNichol, Campbell and others to Kingston costs money, never dreamed of in the olden days. At present more than 30 requests are being held back by Manager Morgenweck for games. A two weeks trip is being asked for and will only be accepted if the support here fails the team.
